

Marriott Munich Utilizes ClickShare in Meeting Room Renovation

Munich is known as one of the premier cities in the world for companies to meet and do business. To solidify that reputation, and to help usher in a new era of connected meeting spaces for their clientele, the Marriott Munich recently decided to renovate their facilities. Going into the new generation—which is tech-savvy, which is already used to playing with smartphones, tablets, et cetera, and using them as a part of life. ClickShare, at the current stage, is the most handy product on the market. It was exactly what we were looking for: wireless, no installation needed, plug and play system, multifunctional, no cabling, no taping, and all of these kinds of things.

Connect

Connect the ClickShare Button and start the application

Click

Click to show your laptop screen on the large meeting room display

Share

Share your content with the other meeting participants

The ClickShare allows users to share what is on their laptop with no need to download software.

The ClickShare by Barco is a device that allows a user to come into a room and relay what is shown on his laptop to a screen or projector. The beauty of the device is that there is no software that needs to be downloaded for the ClickShare to work. You plug the base unit into a projector or screen using either the VGA or HDMI cables connected to the base unit. With each base unit comes a set of dedicated ClickShare buttons, which connect to laptops using a USB cord. The buttons connect to the base unit via a wireless network created in the room. Simply click the button and what is shown on the laptops shows up onscreen.